The celebrated author of Border explores a mysterious, ancient, and little-understood corner of Europe—Lake Ohrid and its lands. Two lakes that have played a role both in the turbulent memories of the region's past and the secret of its enduring allure. Kassabova uncovers the human drama that lies beneath the surface, providing a nuanced and compelling portrait of a region that has been shaped by complex historical forces. Through her travels and research, she locates a deeper inquiry into how geography and politics imprint themselves upon families and nations, one that confronts contemporary challenges and offers lessons for the future.

The End of the World's Most Dangerous Mediterranean:

In Mediterranean Winter, Richard N. Stavridis, a retired four-star admiral and the former Supreme Allied Commander of NATO, shares his insights on the complex challenges facing the region today. With a deep understanding of the region's history, culture, and politics, Stavridis offers a unique perspective on the issues that are shaping the Mediterranean and beyond. From the rise of populism to the ongoing threat of terrorism, Mediterranean Winter provides a thought-provoking analysis of the region's current challenges.

The Accidental Admiral:

In The Accidental Admiral, Robert D. Kaplan, the bestselling author of Balkan Ghosts, takes readers on a journey to the frontlines of the Syrian conflict, offering insights on the strategic and geopolitical implications of the war. With a keen eye for detail and a deep understanding of history and culture, Kaplan provides a fresh perspective on the evolving nature of warfare in the 21st century.

The Ends of the Earth:

In The Ends of the Earth, Simon Winchester explores the history of the Balkans, a region that has been the stage for some of the most significant events in European history. Through his travels and research, Winchester offers a vivid and illuminating account of the region's past, from the Ottoman Empire to the present day. With a writing style that is both engaging and informative, Winchester's account provides a comprehensive understanding of the Balkans and its role in the larger context of European history.

Mediterranean Winter:

In Mediterranean Winter, Robert Kaplan, the celebrated author of Balkan Ghosts, takes readers on a journey to the Mediterranean, retracing the footsteps of the ancient Greeks. With a keen eye for history, culture, and politics, Kaplan provides a fresh perspective on the region's past and present, offering insights on the geopolitical challenges facing the Mediterranean today.

The Balkans:

With Balkan Ghosts, Kaplan explores the complex history of the Balkans, a region that has been shaped by centuries of conflict and cultural exchange. Through his travels and research, Kaplan offers a fresh perspective on the region's past and present, offering insights on the geopolitical challenges facing the Balkans today. With a keen eye for history, culture, and politics, Kaplan provides a comprehensive understanding of the region's past and present.

The Revenge of Geography:

In The Revenge of Geography, civilizations are at war with one another, not just for oil, but for the planet itself. Kaplan explains how the world we live in is a result of geography and how it shapes the future of the planet. With a keen eye for history, culture, and politics, Kaplan provides a fresh perspective on the region's past and present, offering insights on the geopolitical challenges facing the Balkans today.

Online Library Balkan Ghosts A Journey Through History
Aเหนือเทคโนโลยีสารสนเทศ A digital library of the future can be an aid to the development of a new generation of learning tools and platforms. By providing access to a wide range of information and resources, such a library can help students and researchers to engage with new ideas and ideas, and to develop new perspectives and approaches to learning. In this context, A appears to be a valuable resource for those interested in exploring the potential of digital libraries to support learning and research.

The New York Times Book Review: This new edition of Balkan Ghosts includes six opinion pieces written by Robert Kaplan about the Balkans between 1996 and 2001. These pieces reveal much about the impact of the Cold War on the region and its people, and provide valuable insights into the ongoing conflicts in the area.
"Kaplan's exploration of this misunderstood island offers a much-needed look at a much-maligned land."—Paul Pollock, author of The Undersea Sun in Sicily in the Mediterranean's largest and most mysterious island. Its people, for three thousand years under the thumb of one invader after another, hold tightly onto a culture so unique that they remain emotionally and culturally distinct, viewing themselves first as Sicilians, not Italians. Many of these islanders, carrying considerable DNA from Arab and Muslim ancestors who ruled for 250 years and integrated vast numbers of settlers from the continent just ninety miles to the south, say proudly that Sicily is located north of Africa, not south of Italy. Seeking Sicily explores what lies behind the veil of the island's inhabitants. It tackles on history, food, the Mafia, and politics and looks to nineteenth- and twentieth-century Sicilian authors to plumb the islanders' so-called Sicilittude. This "culture ape" is best exemplified by the writings of one of Sicily's greatest writers, Leonardo Sciascia. Seeking Sicily also looks to contemporary Sicilians who have never shaken off the influences of their forbears, who believed in the ancient gods and goddesses. Author John Kaplan is not content to let images from the island's overly touristed villages carry the story. Starting in Palermo, he journeyed to such places as Arab-founded Scopello on the west coast, the Greek ruins of Selinunte on the southeast, and Sciascia's ancestral village of Racalmuto in the south, where he experienced unique, local festivities. He spent Easter Week in Enna at the island's center, witnessing surreal processions that date back to Spanish rule. And he learned about Sicilian cuisine in Spanish Baroque Noto and Greek Sicarian in the southeast, and met elderly, retired fishermen in the tiny east-coast fishing village of Avola Trinacria, home of the mythical Cyclops and immortalized by Luchino Visconti's mid-1940s film masterpiece, La terra trema. He walked near the summit of Etna, Europe's largest and most active volcano, studied the mountain's role in creating this island, and looked out over the expanse of the Ionian Sea, marveling at the three millennia of myths and history that forged Sicily into what it is today. A history of the Balkan Peninsula explores the region's political, social, and religious past in order to understand the nature of the recently rekindled, centuries-old blood feuds. Reprint. 15,000 first printing. Having reported on some of the world's most violent, least understood regions in his bestsellers Balkan Ghosts and The Ends of the Earth, Robert Kaplan now returns to his native land, the United States of America. Traveling, like Tocqueville and John Gunther before him, through a political and cultural landscape in transition, Kaplan reveals a nation shedding a familiar identity as it assumes a radically new one. An Empire Wilderness opens in Fort Leavenworth, Kansas, where the first white settlers moved into Indian country and where Manifest Destiny was born. In a world whose future conflicts can barely be imagined, it is also the place where the army trains its men to fight the next war. "A nostalgic view of the United States is deliberately cultivated here," Kaplan writes, "so as to blur the uncertain future to a reliable past." From Fort Leavenworth, Kaplan travels west to the great cities of the heartland—to St. Louis, once a glorius shipping center expected to outshine imperial Rome and now toured, with its desolate inner city and miles of suburban gated communities, as "the most average American city." Kaplan continues west to Omaha; down through California; north from Mexico; across Arizona, New Mexico, and Texas; up to Montana and Canada, and back through Oregon. He visits Mexican border settlements and dust-blown county sheriff's offices, Indian reservations and nuclear bomb plants, cattle ranches in the Oklahoma Panhandle, glacier-mantled forests in the Pacific Northwest, soundly protested arms sprawls and iron box terminals, and comes, at last, to the great battlefield at Vicksburg, Mississippi, where an earlier generation of Americans gave their lives for their vision of an American future. But what, if anything, he asks, will today's Americans fight and die for? At Vicksburg Kaplan contemplates the new America through which he has just traveled—an America of sharply polarized communities that draws its population from pools of talent far beyond its borders; an America where the distance between winners and losers grows exponentially as corporations assume government functions and the wealthy find themselves more closely linked to their business associates in India and China than to their power neighbors a few miles away; an America where old allegiances and allegiances are vanishing and new ones are only beginning to emerge. The new America he found in is the pages of this book. Kaplan gives a precise and chilling vision of how the most successful nation the world has ever known is entering the final, and highly uncertain, phase of its history. Presents the historical and geopolitical background of the country of Kosovo, including its annexation by Serbia in 1912 and incorporation into Yugoslavia, its declaration of independence in February, 2008, and its strategic importance to the Western Balkans. "Already an international sensation: a debut novel that tells a love story in two radically different moments in time, bringing together a young man, his mother, a boxer, and a capricious cat. In 1980s Yugoslavia, a young Muslim girl is married off to a man she hardly knows, but who was meant to be a happy match goes quickly wrong. Soon thereafter her country is torn apart by war and she and her family flee. Years later, her son, Bekim, grows up a social outcast in present day Finland, not just an immigrant in a country suspicious of foreigners, but a gay man in an unaccepting society. Aside from casual hookups, his only friend is a less construcotr whom, improbably—he is terrified of snakes—he lives his apartment. But during a visit to a gay bar, Bekim meets a talking cat who moves in with him and his snake. It is this witty, charming, manipulative creature who starts Bekim on a journey back to Kosovo to confront his demons, and make sense of the magical, cruel, incredible history of his family. And it is this that, in turn, enables him finally, to open himself to true love—which he will find in the most unexpected place." NAMED ONE OF THE BEST BOOKS OF THE YEAR BY FINANCIAL TIMES From Robert D. Kaplan, named one of the world's Top 100 Global Thinkers by Foreign Policy magazine, comes a penetrating look at the volatile region that will dominate the future of geopolitical conflict. Over the last decade, the center of world power has been quietly shifting from Europe to Asia. With oil reserves of several billion barrels, an estimated nine hundred trillion cubic feet of natural gas, and several centuries' worth of competing territorial claims, the South China Sea in particular is a simmering pot of potential conflict. The underreported military buildup in the area where the Western Pacific meets the Indian Ocean means that it will likely be a hinge point for global war and peace for the foreseeable future. In Asia's Cauldron, Robert D. Kaplan offers up a vivid snapshot of the nations surrounding the South China Sea, the conflicts brewing in the region at the dawn of the twenty-first century, and their implications for global peace and stability. One of the world's most perceptive foreign policy experts, Kaplan interprets America's interests in Asia in the context of an increasingly assertive China. He explains how the region's unique geography fosters the growth of navies but also impedes aggression. And he draws a striking parallel between China's quest for hegemony in the South China Sea and the United States' imperial drive in the Caribbean more than a century ago. To understand the future of conflict in East Asia, Kaplan argues, one must understand the goals and motivations of its leaders and its people. Part travelogue, part geopolitical primer, Asia's Cauldron takes us on a journey through the region's boom cities and ramshackle slums; from Vietnam, where the superfluous capital of the embattled colonial capital, Saigon, inspires the poststrategic pretensions of the official seat of government in Hanoi, to Malaysia, where a unique mix of authoritarian Islamic and Western-style consumerism creates quite possibly the ultimate postmodem society; and from Singapore, where "benoventant" helped foster an economic miracle, to the Philippines, where a different brand of authoritarianism under Ferdinand Marcos led not to economic growth but to decades of corruption and crime. At a time when every day's news seems to contain some new story—large or small—that directly relates to conflicts over the South China Sea, Asia's Cauldron is an indispensable guide to a corner of the globe that will affect all of our lives for years to come. Praise for Asia's Cauldron "Asia's Cauldron is a short book with a powerful thesis, and it stands out for its clarity and good sense. ... If you are doing business in China, traveling in Southeast Asia or just obsessing about geopolitics, you will want to read it."—The New York Times Book Review "Kaplan has established himself as one of our most consequential geopolitical thinkers. ... Asia's Cauldron" is part treatise on geopolitics, part travel narrative. Indeed, he writes in the tradition of the great travel writers. ... The Weekly Standard "Kaplan's fascinating book is a welcome challenge to the pessimists who see only trouble in China's rise and the hawks who view it as malign."—The Economist "Muscular, deeply knowledgeable...Kaplan is an ultra-rational [who] takes a non-moralistic stance on questions of power and diplomacy."—Financial Times An up-close account of the devastating conflict in Bosnia, 1992-3 Copyright code: fa276fa357b0f89b138ed3d4f0c13e